Pokemon insurgence vipik gym guide online free printable

This, however, I didn't. Not bad for a 4 level difference, especially when the other side is mega evolved. Clarence wipes the floor with it. So let's get started. : You here to battle? If I had taken him up to 34 or 35, he would probably outspeed the Mega Beedrill and would one shot it regardless. Random choice says let's take the lower tree first. Clarence can hit the Haunter pretty hard with Pursuit, but... On poison damaging your pokemon if they stay in battle after KOing something. So, here we are in front of the second gym. The Beedrill is Xavier's ace. Instead, he takes it down to 1 HP with a supereffective STAB attack. Oh fuck me. Clarence is a little underleveled, but it should be fine. I forgot that Tentacruel is a fucking wall. If Crunch could have landed, duranduran would have torn it apart. But first he should probably evolve. I call bullshit on this, by the way. Like I said, as long as you keep a mental map of where you've been and where you need to go, this isn't a difficult gym gimmick. The second attempt starts out well! I expected this to happen. Clarence goes down and with him, my chances at victory. This is the fifth attempt. That Tentacruel was going below the belt as hard as it could. Shuckle will be first up which is why duranduran is going out first. You can't make me! I'm going to have to go, aren't I? Moveset could use some work, but I've seen worse. Croagunk is screwed here, so moving on... Please no. She only falls flat at the end when it combines its stupidly high attack with STAB X-Scissor. No really. Right... Thanks to duranduran being a beast, she very nearly takes out the Mega Beedrill. I thought this was a solved issue. Clarence will be tagging in for the leader fight. Instead she never got a chance to act. Fuck right the fuck off with that Arceus worship crap. This is yet another T intersection. Here, we're in the second gym of eight! Flamethrower replaces Incinerate and now Infector is perfectly positioned to take on the gym leader. I don't want to. Maybe one day you'll get to do it too... I wasn't looking forward to doing this boss fight and now I'm sure as hell not looking forward to covering it. I was wrong. So I had something much faster than all of Xavier's team hitting him stupidly hard for weaknesses. So... Seriously... Fuck off. You can juuust barely make out the edges of the path. Lots of bug types wanting to put a hurt on a dark type... The others died at various points in the battle, but none were as interesting as the second. Seriously, you have to say about it! Part of me is thinking that it's awful early to be learning Flamethrower, but level 30 is firmly the midgame in any other pokemon title. Famous last words, those. Thundervolt trades with Haunter and eventually emerges victorious, but it was not a good exchange. The Beedrill is not only custom built to counter whatever it's weak to, but it can mega evolve! The Haunter, meanwhile, just hits like a runaway train. Anyway, that's it for now. I shamelessly look up what these teams are beforehand so I can make plans. Likewise, Zucchini is here to counter the Croagunk. I rolled right over them. It's a straight shot through. Film at 11. Can't you see it? By the time I had gotten to this point, that Ponyta was a Rapidash. I didn't see it at the time, but the path in the tree splits again. With the second badge, a bunch of shit opens up. I'm going to take this healing opportunity to swap out Chompy Boy for another ace in my pocket. Anyway, random choice says we're going right first. I don't think flash is a move in this game, and the replacement item won't be found for a while more. Fuck. It's a familiar story, duranduran takes out the shuckle across something like 9 turns. Zucchini hits it as hard as he possibly can. It's plainly right there, but something is off about him. The inside of each tree trunk is dark and more than once the path splits. Victories don't get much more clutch than that... It attacked with rollout once, and spent the rest of the time using Curse and trying to repeatedly lay down Sticky Webs. I went down, but presumably up went to another trainer. First off, here's the gym guide guy. Xavier's team is all between 33 and 35, with me. Neither was hitting for supereffective damage, but they were both special attack powerhouses. The name's Xavier. Would you believe that I specifically sought you out for a battle? Because I kinda remember where to go, we're going right at the T intersection in one of the images above. Just that little extra "fuck you." By the way, that wasn't regular poison. Anyway, back in the tree and over to the other side of the intersection. It took half of my team to take out half of his and things were steadily going downhill. : What's good? Supereffective STAB damage did that much. I can't decide if it's his absolute mountain of John Deere Green hair or the fact that he's like twice as big as every other sprite in the game... Welcome to the Vipik City Gym! Xavier's platform is just up here. This is your fault and now we have to pick up the pieces. Fucking hell Nora. And by "get started" I mean show a greatest hits reel. Rage is a terrible move, but Return is a really good one that will only get stronger if we use Clarence more after this. I reset the first attempt at the fight when it became clear I wasn't going to win. Infector barely holds it together against the Haunter. Leader with gym based around the sky uses dragon pokemon. There's no good answer here. Let's try the other tree. : That's called Mega Evolution! It's pretty impressive, right? Yes, it's a fucking terrible gimmick. At 31, duranduran replaces Bite with its bigger, meaner brother. Game over. Welp. Yeah. So how do we navigate the maze? We go left here. Each of the trees like the one we're standing in front of is another underground entrance. No. Some pretty nice gains all around! I'm looking forward to using him more, especially in the upcoming routes. This time? This tree doesn't have a knot, so I guess that means this is a dead end. I want to give a shout out to Avery's Shuckle. Anyway, there's nothing else in here, so we're now done with the right side of the first intersection. duranduran, somehow the lowest leveled member of the team, will be going up first. So you just have to keep a mental map as you go through the area. She had a team full of poison types, and I'm using Zucchini. I was also running a Ponyta on my team, who I then used all through the gym to take out the trash trainers. You might call me crazy, but I'm not learning Solar Beam here. Anyway, let's actually look at his team. how the fuck did I pull that off? My first playthrough, I used the level trainer to take my team all to 35. Haunter is hitting really fucking hard with Shadow Ball. Clarence is a pretty good answer to the Beedrill, so that's a solved problem for future attempts. Rather than send Clarence in, possibly to his death, I elect to leave duranduran in against the Beedrill. See the sides of the little light circle? By the way, this is a thing for both Tentacruel and Haunter. However, the two biggest threats on the team are the Haunter and the Beedrill. My team is in the early-mid 30s, and nobody is higher than 35. It's yet another straight shot across. However, this Haunter caused me more problems than anything else he had. Sweet! : Let's get started! Xavier is not Insurgence's best sprite work. of the town. This gym is Infector's time to shine, and grass moves are pretty much useless against bug and poison types. Knock Off was probably not the smartest choice for the Beedrill to use. I can't believe I won. I lose. Sure thing, kid. Chompy Boy, as it turns out, is an equally bad idea to bring into this gym. Steel will hit for supereffective against Rock. I spend too many turns setting up with HenryDavid and Heracross takes him out. But in order to reach it, we have to go through the second worst type of maze. Xavier is a lowkey pothead. Even when it's neutral, he one shots most everything on my team. It takes guts to swap Shuckle's impressive defense and its pathetic attack around, when the attack already is taking a 30% penalty. Next up was his Tentacruel, and I had serious doubts about Zucchini's ability to handle it, despite its weakness to psychic. HenryDavid takes the Heracross down to half HP and then succumbs to Toxic. It's only ever 3 tiles wide, so as long as you can see both edges of the screen you're fine. Despite being burnt, he still went forward with his Power Trick idea.
